WHITE FRAGILITY:

Why It's So Hard For White People to Talk About Racism

by Robin Diangelo

South Euclid residents and the Greater Cleveland Community are invited to join us for our free Virtual Book Club, where we will discuss books and topics that serve as an entry point to generating open and thoughtful dialogue around issues of diversity & inclusion. Conversations about White Fragility will take place as online "Virtual Zoom Forums" and discussion will be facilitated by diversity, equity and inclusion professional Kimberly Chapmon-Wynne from Mosaic Insights Consulting and Keith Ari Benjamin, South Euclid's Director of Community Services and Certified Diversity Professional.

Community Conversation Dates (each session is approximately 90 minutes):

- July 16, 2020 at 7 pm: White Fragility: Introduction through Chapter 4
- July 30, 2020 at 7 pm: White Fragility - Chapters 5 through 8
- August 13, 2020 at 7 pm: White Fragility - Chapters 9 through 12

The New York Times bestseller White Fragility is available at your local public library, favorite local bookstore or online retailer. It is also widely available in e-book and audio formats.
